

"DUMMY" LOANS FOR MORSE COST BANK $405,000

Ordered Discount of Worthless
Notes and Got the Money,
Receiver Says.

SUES THE EX-BANKER.

Men Who Signed Paper Never Financially Responsible,
Hanna Charges.

Charles W. Morse, former Ice King, to-day was sued for $405,000 with interest in the Supreme Court by Charles A. Hanna, receiver of the National Bank of North America. The allegations made in this action for "monies had and received" are the most sensational yet leveled at Morse.

In substance, Receiver Hanna charges Morse with having filled his bank with loans to "dummies," and his present action is to recover the money which the bank is out by queer transactions carried on by Morse with his willing tools.

The notes are as follows, each supplying a separate cause of action in support of Mr. Hanna's complaint.

Cabin Austin, President of the Consolidated Steamship Company, $102,233.33
W. H. Campbell, Treasurer of the Consolidated Steamship Company, 7,214.67
C. L. Chapin, of Paris, an officer of the Mercedes Automobile Company, 81,000.00
Capt. James T. Morse, uncle of Charles W. Morse, 50,000.00
Pringle & Co., stockbrokers, claim being a former private secretary of Morse, 32,500.00
F. H. Low, cashier of a Morse bank in Bath, Me., 26,907.90
The Consolidated Arizona Smelting Company, 79,440.12
President Wesley M. Oler, President of the American Ice Company, 26,376.40
Who Got the Money? Morse, 8105,076.02

Thus far Receiver Hanna has disclosed that the National Bank of North America was relieved of its cash by Morse in the following proportions:

Notes signed by Charles W. Morse personally, 243,000
Losses sustained by the bank through Morse's speculation with the bank's money, 700,000
Notes signed by Morse "dummies" discounted at the bank by Morse, and to his benefit, 105,233.33
Total, 8105,076.02

There are other transactions which Receiver Hanna has laid before United States District Attorney Stinson.

Morse has already been sued on his notes for $25,000, and on Saturday an action for an accounting was brought against Morse and his fellow directors to recover the $500,000 lost by speculation. Today's action was not unexpected.

In setting forth his complaint Receiver Hanna says that Morse was "vice-president and a member of the board of directors and was the controlling stockholder" of the National Bank of North America. The complaint adds that Morse "dominated and controlled all of the business and operations of the bank and the action of its officers."

Makers Irresponsible.
The complaint further alleges that Morse procured the discount of the eight notes by the National Bank of North America, "and had received the proceeds of the said discounts."
Morse, the complaint all goes, "procured the discounts by virtue of his office and his domination and control of the National Bank of North America and its officers and by representing to the Board of Directors that the makers of these notes were financially responsible."

That there might be no mistake of the character of the makers of the notes, and their true position toward Morse Receiver Hanna says:
"The makers were not at the time of the discounts, and are not now, and never expected, nor intended to pay, as Morse well knew when he procured the discounts."
"The proceeds of the notes were received by Morse from the bank for his own use and not for the use of the makers of the notes, and Morse was merely a cover for the loans so procured from the bank by Morse for his sole use and benefit."

A copy of the summons and complaint in this new action against Morse was served on him last Friday at his residence, No. 728 Fifth avenue.

Morse has vigorously defended his position in relation to the eight notes, which do not even carry his name as an indorser. He declared repeatedly to Mr. Hanna that he was not the real beneficiary.

The makers of the notes tell of circumstances in connection with their transactions with Morse which would indicate that Morse used the now depreciated bonds of the Consolidated steamship company and others of his securities as a medium by which the discounting of the notes was made to fit with the Federal statutes. They would take the watered securities and give Morse their notes, which he then promptly discounted in his own bank.

Diary of a Day in the Life of New York's Biggest New Baby and His Fond, Doting "Ma"

OUT FOR A STROLL IN THE PARK

AT HIS FEED

WANT WILLIAMS AS PRESIDENT OF KNICKERBOCKER

State Bank Superintendent
Will Decline Offer If It Is Tendered.

Because of the desire of some of the old directors of the Knickerbocker Trust Company to control the institution after it reopens on March 26, the voting trustees, H. C. Frick, Myron T. Herrick and Lewis Cass Ledyard, did not submit the list of new directors to the State Superintendent of Banks to-day. They will probably hand it in to-morrow.

The voting trustees and reorganizers would like to have Clark Williams, State Superintendent of Banks, act as president of the rejuvenated institution at a salary of $25,000 a year. The Evening World is in a position to prophesy that Mr. Williams will refuse the office if it is tendered to him, although the salary of the State Superintendent of Banks is only $7,000 a year.

It is said to be his desire to remain in office until he has accomplished many reforms which will put the banking business of the State of New York upon an absolutely safe footing. He is a wealthy man and the big salary offered by the Knickerbocker does not tempt him.

Others who have been considered for the presidency of the reorganized institution are Stuyvesant Fish, former president of the Illinois Central Railroad, and Hamilton Fish, assistant treasurer of the United States in charge of the New York Sub-Treasury.

Julien T. Davies, who on behalf of the old management did brilliant and effective work in bringing about a reorganization and reopening the bank, has been working to the end that the old management shall be installed again. Arrayed against this programme are most of the large depositors, including the Pennsylvania Railroad, which has $1,000,000 in the bank and is prepared to deposit $500,000 more on the date of reorganization.

The old board of the bank tried to get Frederick G. Bourne, who organized one of the depositors' committees, which secured $200,000 worth of assents to the resumption plan, to try for the presidency. Mr. Bourne refused. The choice of a president is largely in the hands of the voting trustees, as their judgment in the appointment of absolute.

It is probable that the new directors will demand the resignation of nearly all the old officers of the Knickerbocker who served in the Charles T. Barney regime. Among those to go are Frederick L. Eldridge, first vice-president, whose health will not permit him to engage in active business; William Turnbull, fourth vice-president; William B. Hamilton, trust officer, and F. G. King, secretary and treasurer. Joseph T. Brown, second vice-president, and B. L. Allen, third vice-president, will probably continue in office under the reorganization.

Mrs. Morse Alone Benefits.
Here is the direct allocation made by Receiver Hanna as to the real beneficiary of the eight notes.
"The proceeds of the notes were received by Morse from the bank for his own use and not for the use of the makers of the notes, and Morse was merely a cover for the loans so procured from the bank by Morse for his sole use and benefit."

A copy of the summons and complaint in this new action against Morse was served on him last Friday at his residence, No. 728 Fifth avenue.

Morse has vigorously defended his position in relation to the eight notes, which do not even carry his name as an indorser. He declared repeatedly to Mr. Hanna that he was not the real beneficiary.

Have you seen Baby Hippo at the Central Park Zoo? He's the most remarkable infant the stork has ever brought here. Seventy-five pounds he weighs, so he's a strapping big fellow for an infant of four days.

Baby Hippo's pedigree is truly authentic, for Miss Murphy, the queen of the tank, is the proud mother of the huge youngster. She is the champion animal circle. Calif. the baby Hippo's father, who died a few months ago, was also abundantly supplied with "too too solid flesh."

The youngest member of the hippopotamus family already gives signs of outdoing his husky parents in the way of avoidance. An Evening World reporter called to-day on the new arrival and was allowed to take a peep at him. The cage in a private room of one of the animal houses, was completely covered with canvas to shield the infant wonder from prying eyes. On tip-toe the nursery was approached and a flap of the drapery was raised.

There he lay, on the edge of the tank, peacefully sleeping while his fond mamma at his side jealously guarded her offspring. A cute little fellow he looked, next to his enormous mother, but when she arose and flopped into the tank and left Hippo, Jr., by himself, he seemed quite a portentous individual. A huge grey rat he resembled, all smooth and shiny, with no eyes, as far as could be discovered, and only stubs of ears.

But Baby Hippo heard the exclamations of admiration which his beauty called forth, and, slowly opening one eye, fixed it disapprovingly on the buxom ones who dared disturb his rest.

"Light" he granted, in a frightened tone, and his mamma, with a bound, came dripping from the tank. She threw her big bulk against the bars and endeavored to drive away the intruders by gutting terrifying cries. The keeper threw some carrots at the angry mother, which pacified her for a moment.

But Baby Hippo soon discovered that he was missing something, and with much effort managed to waddle to the bars. A cavern of a mouth was opened, displaying a toothless jaw, and Baby Hippo wildly snapped at the air, endeavoring to secure a carrot. But Mrs. Murphy evidently didn't believe in solid food for the baby, and gave due warning to the keeper to take his carrots away.

She's that jealous she won't even let me look at him," said Timpie Coyle, who is guardian of Miss Murphy and her infant. She knows her baby's a wonder, and she's as proud of him as any mother in the land. He'll beat his dad in size, all right. He keeps on at this rate, for he has gained twenty-five pounds since his birth last Friday morning. He is the biggest hippopotamus ever born in this country.

The following wireless message, relayed at different points and sent here by way of New York, was also received at the Navy Department to-day:

"ON BOARD U. S. S. GEORGIA, S. P. M., March 8. Via United Wireless Telegram Company. The fleet's position at this hour is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west. The weather is fine and the ships are moving along at a speed of ten and one-half knots per hour. The fleet probably will reach Magdalena Bay on March 12, two days ahead of their schedule."

The cruise has been successful in every way. The ships are in perfect condition and will be ready for record target practice immediately upon their arrival at Magdalena Bay."

The position of the American battleship fleet as given in the wireless despatch from the Georgia is off the Mexican port of Acapulco.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The

SEATTLE, Wash., March 9.—Daniel J. Ainsworth, commander of the revenue cutter Rush, committed suicide yesterday in the bathroom of the vessel by shooting himself in the head.

No one aboard the vessel would venture an opinion as to the cause of the suicide other than to say that the captain seemed worried of late and had acted strangely. A court-martial was in progress involving the conduct of some of the officers aboard the vessel, but the charges did not affect the captain.

Capt. Ainsworth recently applied for a leave of absence to visit his mother, who was ill at Portsmouth, N. H. It is said that his request was refused.

Capt. Ainsworth was forty-five years of age and unmarried.

PACIFIC FLEET IN FAST TIME NEARS MAGDALENA BAY

Two Days Ahead of Schedule and Ships in Fine Shape for Target Practice.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—About the last place that the Navy Department expected to hear from the Pacific battleship fleet for at least six months was on the Atlantic coast, yet this is what has happened. The Navy Department to-day received a telegraphic message from its wireless station at Pensacola, which had been in direct communication with the battleship fleet, a most remarkable performance, considering that the wireless impulses were obliged to traverse the Gulf of Mexico, then cross overland the State of Texas, part of Mexico, and again traverse several hundred miles of ocean. This particular message was from Rear Admiral Thomas, in command of the second division, and was as follows:

"Have you any important news from home?"
The following wireless message, relayed at different points and sent here by way of New York, was also received at the Navy Department to-day:
"ON BOARD U. S. S. GEORGIA, S. P. M., March 8. Via United Wireless Telegram Company. The fleet's position at this hour is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west. The weather is fine and the ships are moving along at a speed of ten and one-half knots per hour. The fleet probably will reach Magdalena Bay on March 12, two days ahead of their schedule."

The cruise has been successful in every way. The ships are in perfect condition and will be ready for record target practice immediately upon their arrival at Magdalena Bay."

The position of the American battleship fleet as given in the wireless despatch from the Georgia is off the Mexican port of Acapulco.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The

SEATTLE, Wash., March 9.—Daniel J. Ainsworth, commander of the revenue cutter Rush, committed suicide yesterday in the bathroom of the vessel by shooting himself in the head.

No one aboard the vessel would venture an opinion as to the cause of the suicide other than to say that the captain seemed worried of late and had acted strangely. A court-martial was in progress involving the conduct of some of the officers aboard the vessel, but the charges did not affect the captain.

Capt. Ainsworth recently applied for a leave of absence to visit his mother, who was ill at Portsmouth, N. H. It is said that his request was refused.

Capt. Ainsworth was forty-five years of age and unmarried.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The

SEATTLE, Wash., March 9.—Daniel J. Ainsworth, commander of the revenue cutter Rush, committed suicide yesterday in the bathroom of the vessel by shooting himself in the head.

battle-ship fleet came into direct communication with Mare Island yesterday, the message being the first this coast has been received from the warships for a distance of 200 miles. Communication was had by wireless from the battleship fleet, the message being from the battleship Maine, of Evans's fleet. Yesterday morning the operator at the wireless station at Mare Island, in responding to the call of his instrument, was surprised to discover he was in direct communication with the Maine. Though 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

battle-ship fleet came into direct communication with Mare Island yesterday, the message being the first this coast has been received from the warships for a distance of 200 miles. Communication was had by wireless from the battleship fleet, the message being from the battleship Maine, of Evans's fleet. Yesterday morning the operator at the wireless station at Mare Island, in responding to the call of his instrument, was surprised to discover he was in direct communication with the Maine. Though 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The first words from the fleet announced the death of Private Samuel Wagoner, marine corps, a native of Alabama, who died on Feb. 29 of pneumonia. He was buried at sea.

The direct communication with the Maine followed closely on the receipt of the relayed message from the Connecticut, picked up by the St. Louis. An additional dispatch received by Pensacola from Admiral Thomas dated on board the Minnesota at 8 o'clock last night, is as follows:

"The position of the fleet at this moment is latitude 14.37 north, longitude 102.01 west."
Admiral Pillsbury, Chief of the Naval Station, states that the fleet is 2,000 miles away, the message was clear. Mare Island acknowledged receipt, but further communication was cut off on account of other stations interrupting.

The Leading Specialty House

Forsythe

Store Bulletin.

Fashions and Styles
for Spring.
OPENING DAYS.
Last week was Suit Week
—this week will be

Waist Week.

There are hundreds of novelties from the plain tailored waist to the most elaborate of fancy waists.
But come and see the whole exhibit. A visit will be the most compensating recreation in the city.

John Forsythe.

Forsythe

The New French Ruffled
Waist.

Over a dozen separate and distinct styles, in the most captivating of colorings.
Striped Batiste, Silk Mulls, Checks and figured Lawns.

$3.50 upward.

Forsythe

Lingerie Waists.

In such a variety that to attempt description would be a trial of ingenuity never finished.
Prices as low as it is safe to pay—waists as luxurious and expensive as your purse can afford.

$2.00 upward.

Forsythe

French Lingerie Waists.

Special Importations. Latest Parisian styles. $12.50 upward.

Forsythe

The Forsythe Waist.

Over 1,000 patterns in our celebrated Genuine Scotch Madras Shirt-waists. White and colors, including new checks, plaids and stripes.
Standard price.

$3.50

Forsythe

Hand Embroidered Waists.

Of fine Irish linen. A most superb collection, and special attention is called to them. $4.85 upward.